I am writing to express my opposition to the proposed ordinance that would allow for the creation of a Zionsville Historic Preservation Commission.

I have come to this conclusion for numerous reasons -- but the short version is this: I believe such an ordinance would unnecessarily burden Zionsville property owners by subjecting them to a new "layer" of regulation (adding extra expense), as well as Zionsville town officials (who would be compelled to comply with any requests for information by an appointed Commission).

Such an ordinance could negatively impact what is a successful and vibrant housing market, with very little discernible upside.

Thank you.
